Let's look at this week's story

E-commerce company, Amazon, has told all staff they need to return to the office five days a week, ending the option to work from home. In a message to all workers, Chief Executive Andy Jassy said the company expected everyone to be in the office full time (apart from some exceptions) from 2nd January 2025. Amazon's new policy is very different from the UK government's approach, which is to make flexible working a right for employees, as promised in a new law proposal due to be announced later this year.

This week's story looks at events related to ...

Amazon was founded by Jeff Bezos from his garage in Bellevue, Washington.

Read through the information below about Amazon's decision to end working from home.

What are Amazon's new rules?

Workers at Amazon will be expected to be in the office, or their normal place of work, during all working hours, five days a week. In certain circumstances, such as caring for a sick child or a household emergency, they may work elsewhere.

Before this, workers were expected to be at their place of work a minimum of two days per week.

What is flexible working?

Flexible working is an arrangement allowing people to choose when and where they complete their work. They may wish to work in the office or somewhere remotely, such as at home.

Is working together in person always better?

I think you do your best work when you're happy at home. I do think making sure work reflects the realities of many of our lives today is really important.

UK Business Secretary, Jonathan Reynolds.

The advantages of being together in the office are significant... in summary, we've observed that it's easier for our teammates to learn, model, practice, and strengthen our culture... teaching and learning from one another are more seamless; and, teams tend to be better connected to one another.

Who do you think benefits from this decision and who do you think may find the change difficult? Overall, do you think Amazon's decision is a good one?

Look at the resource below.
Discuss what you think might be happening in each picture.

How are the people interacting with one another?
What might they be saying, thinking or feeling?

Examples of different types of flexible working

Job sharing

Two people share one job and split the hours.

Part time

Working fewer hours/days than full time.

Compressed hours

Working full-time hours but over fewer days.

Flexitime

Working 'core' hours each day e.g., 10am – 4pm, but choosing when to start and end work.

Remote working and working from home

Not working in the usual workplace. This can be anywhere, including home.

Hybrid working

Combining remote working with working in the usual workplace.

Annualised hours

Working a set number of hours per year but having some flexibility about when.

Read the comments people have made about flexible working. Which do you think are points for flexible working and which are points against it?

It can be really hard to find a time for everyone to meet, as people are in at different times and on different days.

Remy

Working remotely can get lonely at times and I have no team around me to 'spark' ideas from.

Isabella

I moved home but didn't move jobs!

Amara

A joiner working flexitime.

I have a job share. We work really well together and because we have different strengths and skills, we both bring a great deal to our role. It also means I can spend time with my young children on the days I am not working.

David

A graphic designer working from home.

Do you think you would choose to work flexibly? Why?

Reflection

Spending time and interacting with others is an important part of life, both when we are working and in our leisure time. Depending on the activity, there will be times we achieve more with others, and times we do better independently.

Individual Liberty

At the moment, all employees have the right to request flexible working. Being aware of our rights and freedoms in the workplace can provide us with balance, fulfilment and enjoyment.

Protected Characteristics

Companies, like Amazon, have many employees. The law protects all employees from being treated unfairly at work.

Sex

Sexual Orientation

Age

Disability

Gender Reassignment

Marriage and Civil Partnership

Pregnancy and Maternity

Race

Religion or Belief

UN Rights of the Child

Children have the right to be protected from doing work that is dangerous or bad for their education, health or development. If children work, they have the right to be safe and paid fairly.

Useful vocabulary

Attend

Go to or be present at a place or event.

Can you think of any jobs that need people to attend the place of work?

Flexible

Being able to adjust to new changes or situations.

Flexible working is an arrangement allowing people to choose when and where they complete their work.

Leisure

Free time to do the things you enjoy, like reading, playing or watching TV.

Spending time and interacting with others is an important part of life, both when we are working and in our leisure time.

Policy

A set of rules or guidelines that a company or person can use to help make decisions and take actions.

Amazon's new policy is very different from the UK government's approach.

Proposal

Ideas or plans that someone suggests to others for approval or agreement to move forward with a project, event, or action.

The UK government's approach [...] is to make flexible working a right for employees, as promised in a new law proposal due to be announced later this year.

Remotely

Doing something from a distance or a different location, often using computers or phones to stay connected.

They may wish to work in the office or somewhere remotely, such as at home.

- Look at this week's poster and predict what you think this week's news story might be about.
- Read through the information, found on the assembly resource, about Amazon's decision to end working from home. Who do you think benefits from this decision and who do you think may find the change difficult?
- Considering flexible working, make a list of the pros and cons of people being able to work flexibly. Can you think of any jobs that need people to attend the place of work? E.g., a mechanic or a doctor.
- Watch this week's useful video, which talks about Amazon's new working rules. What are some of the benefits Amazon offers for working together in an office, as outlined in the video?
- Thinking about your day so far, have you had many interactions with other people? How important have they been in your day? How might your day have been different if you didn't have those interactions?

Reflection

Spending time and interacting with others is an important part of life, both when we are working and in our leisure time. Depending on the activity, there will be times we achieve more with others, and times we do better independently.

What are some examples of human interactions?

- Write 'interactions' on the board. Does anyone know what this means? Have you ever interacted with someone or something?
- Explain that interaction is when two or more people or things communicate with or react to each other. We have many interactions with people throughout our day. Can you think of any examples?
- Look at resource 1. Discuss what you think might be happening in each picture. How are the people interacting with one another? What might they be saying, thinking or feeling? Would you describe any of the interactions as positive or negative?
- Explore interacting with each other using only one form e.g., speaking only, gestures only (smile, folded arms, thumbs up), writing only, pictures only. Do you have a preferred way of interacting? We often use a variety of different ways when interacting with people. Share any examples you have.
- Are your interactions with others different, depending on where you are and who you are with? Do you interact differently with your friends, at school, at home?
- Make a list of ways you could interact with each other today that would help make a positive, caring and happy classroom!

Reflection

We interact with people many times a day! By listening, showing respect and kindness, and being positive, we can make connections with each other that help us feel happy and safe.

What are some pros and cons of flexible working?

- Think about flexible working. What do you know about it? Do you know anyone who works flexibly? What do they do? Where and when do they work?
- There are many different types of flexible working. Look at resource 2, which shares some examples. Were you aware there were so many different types of flexible working? Do you think you would choose to work flexibly? Why?
- Read the comments people have made about flexible working on resource 2. Which do you think are points for flexible working and which are points against it?
- Make a list of other points for and against flexible working. Consider employee well-being, number of sick days, travel and its costs, teamwork, communication.
- All employees can make a request for flexible working. The employer may agree to the request or it may be refused. Discuss why an employer may refuse a request for flexible working. Do you think the type of job or role may impact their decision?
- In the UK, flexible working was not widely adopted until the early 2000s. How do you think advances in technology have impacted when and where people work? What do you predict flexible working might look like in the future?

Reflection

There are many different factors that can affect whether someone works flexibly or not. We spend a significant amount of time working, so considering a role where you feel happy can be very important.

KS2 follow-up ideas

Option 1

Use this opportunity to read and research different jobs, what they entail and if they offer flexible working. You could reach out to your local community to invite people in to share what they do or send a letter/email to a local firm or business.

- Do you have an idea of what job you may like in the future?
- What are your strengths and interests?

Option 2

Take part in some challenges that require a team of about eight people working together and communicating well. You could use the following ideas:

- Time how long it takes to organise your team oldest to youngest, without talking.
- Make up a chant, rap or song to represent your team.
- Hold hands with each member of your team in a circle, ensuring a hoop is positioned between two people. Time how long it takes to get the hoop around the circle, without letting go!
- Use two gymnastics mats to get your whole team across the length of the hall/playground without touching the floor.

Once you have completed your challenges, discuss the following:

- How successful were your team?
- Was there a leader?
- What teamwork skills did you need?
- Would you have found any of these challenges easier if you did them alone? Would you have enjoyed them more/less?
- How did you interact with others in your team?

KS1 follow-up ideas

Option 1

We interact with our teacher and each other to learn! Play some games with each other to speed up your maths facts recall. Use the following ideas or create your own:

- Work with a partner. They say a two-digit number, you say a number one more or one less.
- Sit in a circle with about five others. Practise counting up and back in 2s, 5s or 10s, taking it in turns.
- As a class, play a game of number bond bingo. Write six numbers on a whiteboard between 0 and 20. Your teacher says a number, if you have its pair to 20, cross it off. Shout 'bingo' if you cross off all six.
- Work with a partner. They say a number less than 100, you write it in digits and words.

Option 2

Move around the classroom. As you pass someone greet them! Discuss the interactions that took place when you greeted someone e.g., a wave, handshake, smile, say hello.

- Do you know how to greet someone in a different language? How do you say 'hello' in France or Spain?

Explore different greetings from around the world. You could locate some of them on a world map.

- Do you think a smile and a wave are universal greetings?

Pumpkin Power

Aleksandr Chusov has grown a record-breaking pumpkin in Russia, weighing an enormous 817kg! The giant pumpkin was crowned the largest in Russian history after a special weigh-in at the Moscow State University Botanical Garden. Aleksandr, who is 28 years old, won the top prize at the Autumn Festival of Vegetables. He explained how he grew the pumpkin saying, 'You select the biggest pumpkins and cross them with other giant pumpkins. Then, with the right care, like proper watering, fertilising, and planting at the right time, they just get bigger and bigger!' The massive pumpkin is now famous, and Aleksandr is proud of his amazing gardening skills. What a pumpkin!

Disney Decoration!

A uniquely decorated home has gone viral after it was put up for sale by its Disney superfan owner! The estate agents in charge of selling the home posted that their advertisement had gone global: 'Our property listing has captured the world's attention, and we couldn't be more thrilled! 🇬🇧' The Disney-themed home features huge murals of famous characters, such as Aladdin, Mary Poppins and Peter Pan. town of Rhyl, in Denbighshire. Marti Anderson-Bryan from Elwy Estates explained, 'The current homeowner, she's a real massive Disney fan. She's been to Disney over twenty times, and she's actually lived in that house her whole life. Lots of people are just obviously really curious just to see the artwork because obviously, people have just never seen anything like it before!'

Hunt for Happiness

Michael Zervos has announced that he has reached the halfway mark on his mission to travel to every country in the world. He is aiming to do this in the shortest number of days possible. There are 195 countries to go to and he has visited almost 100 so far! He is calling his world-record-breaking attempt, Project Kosmos! He describes his adventure as 'a record-breaking journey of happiness.' As he travels, he is asking the residents of each country the same question: What is the happiest moment of your life? The Greek-American filmmaker is collecting and then publishing the answers and stories that go with them online. He hopes by doing this he will spread happiness and the belief that everyone can be happy, wherever they live in the world, and whoever they are!

'I'm amazed I'm on schedule,' Michael admitted, 'Occasionally it means maybe spending a day less in a certain place, but I've tried to make the most out of those situations.' Describing the experience so far, he added, 'It's changed me in ways that I can't really articulate!'

Are there any countries that you would like to travel to?

What is the happiest moment of your life?

Will classrooms of the future be teacherless?

I think that we will always need human teachers as they will always be better at understanding their class.
